

and Climate Change Girl's Education

In poor regions affected by climate change, natural disasters such as tropical storms, landslides, and floods stops girls from going to school.

Poor families that suffer from food shortages caused by climate change disrupting season patterns might have to sell off their daughters as brides, slaves, or concubines.

By reducing the effects of climate change, we help girls around the world to have an education.

This helps promote gender equality and build resilient individuals.

Things we can do:

1. Use renewable energy sources
2. Ride a bike or use public transports
3. Recycle materials and sort out your trash.
4. Be educated! Teach others!
